

Boone County Health Center

Construction Blog

Basement begins to take recognizable shape.

October 5, 2009, 2:50 pm

the basement slab getting poured.

As cooler weather begins to come in, the construction team faces some new challenges. They also have some big goals achieved as the basement of the Phase III addition begins to take shape and the building becomes easily recognizable.

The Basement floor slab was poured and the steel reinforcements went in this past week. With that the construction site is giving onlookers a more clear picture of what BCHC has in store for the community in the coming years.

With the destruction of the Ambulance bay during this process, EMT's have been using the main entrance as the drop-off / pickup location. With the new bay beginning to take shape, that will soon be a thing of the past.

Steel reinforcements being erected for the main floor.

new ambulance bay footings

main floor takes shape with steel reinforcements